Canton, Ohio and the National Football League

Each year, approximately 250,000 fans from all over the world visit the Pro Football Hall of Fame in Canton, Ohio. The museum's guest register reveals that in a year's time, visitors come from all fifty states and from sixty to seventy foreign countries.

Many wonder why the Hall of Fame is located in this small northeast Ohio city. Often, museums are built in locations that have historical significance to their subject matter. The Pro Football Hall of Fame is no exception. Canton's ties to pro football began long before the Hall of Fame was built in 1963. On September 17, 1920, a meeting was held in an automobile showroom in downtown Canton. It was at this time that the American Professional Football Association was formed. Two years later, the league changed its name to the National Football League.

Today, fans follow teams like the Dallas Cowboys, San Francisco 49ers, and the Miami Dolphins. But, in 1920, none of those teams existed. Rather, the NFL had teams like the Columbus Panhandles, Dayton Triangles, Rochester Jeffersons, and the Canton Bulldogs.

The Canton Bulldogs were the first real pro football powerhouse. They won the NFL title in 1922 and 1923 making them the league's first two-time champion.

They were a strong team even before the NFL began because of their star player Jim Thorpe. Thorpe, a Native American Indian, was a tremendous athlete. Not only did he play pro football but he played pro baseball and won two gold medals in the 1912 Olympic Games. Even today, he is considered to be one of the world's greatest athletes of all time.

While the Bulldogs are no longer around, pro football remembers its early days in Canton, Ohio. Visitors, young and old, enjoy the story of pro football's history in the city where the NFL began!

The Legendary Jim Thorpe

Who Was Jim Thorpe?

It seems that whenever stories are written about an all-time pro football great, Jim Thorpe's name comes up. Jim Thorpe was born in a one-room cabin in Prague, Oklahoma, on May 28, 1888. Though he had some Irish and French blood, he was mostly of Sac and Fox Indian heritage. In fact, his Indian name was Wa-Tho-Huk, which means Bright Path.

Though football was his first love, he gained his greatest fame as a track star, winning the decathlon and pentathlon events in the 1912 Olympics, held in Stockholm, Sweden. King Gustav V of Sweden told Thorpe, as he presented him with his medals, "Sir, you are the greatest athlete in the world." But soon afterward, Thorpe was stripped of his records and medals when it was learned that he had played minor league baseball for money in 1911. In 1984 the Olympic Committee decided that this was an unfair interpretation of the then Olympic rules and restored his records and returned his medals to his family.

In 1915, Thorpe's great abilities and fame led Jack Cusack to offer him $250 a game to play football for the Canton Bulldogs. While that may not sound like much, it was twice as much as most players were making back then. Even Cusack's friends warned him that he was paying Thorpe too much. Just the same, Thorpe was everything Cusack had hoped he would be -- a great player and a gate attraction. After missing the first two games of the 1916 season because he was playing pro baseball for the New York Giants, Thorpe joined the Canton squad. With Jim playing halfback, the Bulldogs were unofficial World Champions in 1916, 1917 and 1919. (The Bulldogs' championships are said to be unofficial since no organized pro league existed at the time.)

Many old-timers who actually played against Thorpe claimed he was the toughest man ever to play the game. Legend says that Jim would drop-kick a field goal from the 50-yard line, then turn and kick another 50-yarder in the opposite direction with perfect results--just to show off. Others say he could punt a ball the length of the field. Both are probably exaggerations. In any case, there is no doubt that Thorpe was a superb athlete. All accounts suggest he could run with speed and bruising power. He could pass and catch passes with the best. He could kick with accuracy and strength. And, of course, as players did back then, he played defense too.

By the time the NFL was organized in 1920, the thirty-two-year-old Thorpe, who was already past his athletic prime, was unanimously voted the league's charter president. However, he managed to play eight NFL seasons with six different teams and his gate appeal continued. Though at times he sparkled like the Thorpe of old, he never really excelled as much in the NFL as he had in his earlier career. In 1928, at the age of forty he finally called it quits. In 1950, the nation's press honored Thorpe by naming him the most outstanding athlete of the first fifty years of the twentieth century. In 1963, he was elected a charter member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Gridiron Terminology

Audible:	A change in plays shouted in code by the quarterback at the line of scrimmage.
Blitz:	A pass rush by one or more linebackers and/or defensive backs.
Crossbar:	The horizontal bar of a goal post over which a field-goal or extra point kick must go.
Defense:	The team without possession of the football.
Draft:	How college players are picked for the pros. The worst team from the previous year receives the first pick in the draft, the best receives the final pick in each round.
End Zone:	The 10-yard deep area behind the goal line. You score touchdowns by getting into the end zone with the ball.
Field Goal:	A scoring kick worth three points, it may be attempted from anywhere on the field.
Fumble:	A dropped ball by a player who had possession of the football. A fumble can generally be advanced by any player who picks it up.
Goal Post:	The structures centered at the back of the end zone on either end of the field. They are used as the targets for field goal and extra-point kickers.
Hang Time:	The amount of time the ball stays in the air after it was punted.
Interception:	When a defensive player catches a pass intended for the offensive player.
Interference:	When a defensive player inhibits, by the way of illegal contact, a receiver's ability to run a pass pattern or catch. It is an automatic first down at the spot of the penalty.
Lateral:	A sideways or backwards toss of the ball to another player.
Line of Scrimmage:	An imaginary line that runs across the field where the ball is placed at the beginning of the play.
Motion:	The lateral movement of one running back or receiver before the ball is snapped.
Offense:	The team with possession of the football.
Pocket:	The area of protection for a quarterback formed by his blockers.
Quarter:	A 15-minute playing period; four quarters make up a game.
Rookie:	A player in his first season of professional football.
Safety:	When a player is tackled in his own end zone with the football. It is worth two points for the opposing team.
Uprights:	The vertical poles of a goal post through which an extra-point or a field goal kick must pass.
Veteran:	A player with at least one year of professional playing experience.

Football Bingo

- Distribute a bingo card to each student.
- Distribute the corresponding football shapes and have students color and cut them out for marking their cards.
- The card can be used for a variety of football learning and the students will love it.
- Examples:
 - * Have students write NFL team nicknames on the board and the teacher calls out the city. This can also be done the opposite way.
 - * From a selected list label each square on the board with a football term. The teacher reads a definition and they must match the correct term with the definition.
 - * List NFL states on the board and the teacher calls the capital of those states.
- Have students help decide the type of Bingo, vertical, horizontal, four corners, whole board, etc.
- HAVE FUN!
